

On June 6, 2014, Governor Malloy signed Public Act 14-94, which establishes the Materials Innovation and Recycling Authority (“MIRA”) as the successor authority to the Connecticut Resources Recovery Authority (“CRRRA”). Pursuant to this new legislation, MIRA will continue to provide solid waste materials management services, with a focus on the development of additional resource recovery, recycling, and processing enterprises on property owned by the Authority and the attendant redevelopment of the Connecticut Solid Waste System.

The evolution of CRRRA into MIRA will not disrupt any of the Authority’s business or business relationships. As specified in Public act 14-94, MIRA has assumed the rights and responsibilities of CRRRA in accordance with Section 4-38d of the Connecticut General Statutes, which addresses the transfer of functions, powers and duties from a department, institution, agency or authority to a successor in a manner which assures continuity. Section 4-38d essentially provides that MIRA replaced CRRRA as of the effective date of the legislation, and that

1. All orders or regulations of CRRRA remain in full force and effect as orders or regulations of MIRA;
2. MIRA is substituted for CRRRA in any outstanding legal proceedings;
3. Contracts, rights of action or matters undertaken or commenced by CRRRA will now be undertaken and completed by MIRA under the same terms and conditions;
4. The officers and employees of CRRRA are the officers and employees of MIRA; and
5. All property of CRRRA is the property of MIRA.

What this means for CRRRA’s municipal and private customers, contractors, vendors, service providers and employees is that you are now a stakeholder in MIRA in the same way you were a stakeholder in CRRRA. MIRA will be conducting an ongoing review of how these relationships are memorialized and will be following up as necessary with any specifically required notices and documents. In the meantime, please call me if you have any questions or require specific documentation to continue your existing business relationship under the governance of MIRA. Until notified otherwise, MIRA’s business address, contact persons, phone numbers and email addresses are the same as previously used by CRRRA.

Sincerely,
